vision among our people, and that every petty election should not, and shall not, furnish a pretext for renewed agitation and the re-opening of all wounds. We speak with authority when we say, that if small but various crowds who projected the Perkins ticket had sent out from Mr. Hillier's backroom a solid prohibition ticket composed of such men as Westmoreland, Rankin, Dorey, Haygood, Chamberlin, Harle, Kiser, Imman, Hillier, Anderson, Adair, or any other three of a hundred such men, it would have been accepted with a sense of relief, and elected unanimously. The methods of its putting out, would have been lost in the merits of the ticket itself, and the anti-prohibitionists would have accepted it rather than prolong a fight that was useless and dangerous. But when the ticket itself was as weak as the methods, and when it was bound together by a compact between classes made in the dangerous spirit of demagoguery, the people, prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists alike, revolted against the dictation and the dicker, and overwhelmed the ill-advised ticket. No candidate of a class has ever been elected in Atlanta, and it will be a sad day whenever one is. The democratic party is broad enough to comprehend the needs of this people, and neither republican intrigues, nor leaders of cliques can break down its supremacy.

Now let us come together in peace and harmony, and shoulder to shoulder work out Atlanta's future. Prohibition is safe until the time of its experiment has passed. It is in no danger from the ticket elected yesterday. It cannot be in any danger from any ticket elected in Atlanta, until next November year, when it will be tried again by the people on its merits. If it has proven good, it will stand when that test is made, and if it has proven bad, it will fall. Until then the man who attempts to make it the issue in every popular election, or ride into office on its strength, is an unwelcome prohibitionist to say the least.

There will be no attempt to repeal the prohibition law. Even those who opposed it say that it should have a fair trial. This is all its friends can ask. Let us put an end then to this persistent bickering and strife, and bring our people together once more, accepting the situation as it stands, and uniting with enthusiasm and earnestness for the glory and growth of our city. If we do this, the benefit of yesterday's election will be confessed on all sides, and Atlanta, with the chiefs of her son's locked solid once more for our defense and advancement, will start on a new and unexampled era of prosperity.

Is Our Coastal Plain Too Heavy.

Mr. George R. Cather, a well known scientist, has an article in the New York Sun sustaining and explaining the land-slip theory of the Charleston earthquake. Mr. Cather says:

The true or primary cause of the disturbance, I suggest, is to be found in the pressure of the mountain ranges northwest of the point where the effects were particularly marked. While I cannot undertake to elaborate the suggestion, I can add that high elevations, like the Alleghenies and others, as to their altitude, can never be preserved in the long run. Though imperceptibly they are continually gradually settling, and the country beyond their base is rising as they sink down. If, therefore, depends upon the local situations which surround the great cities as to whether the former can sustain the outward lateral pressure, and thus save the country from an upheaval sooner or later. Any one can see at a glance that the seaboard in the neighborhood of great mountain ranges affords a fine opportunity at any time for one of those mysterious shake-ups when the relative situations favor such, and the conditions are ripe for it, while on the opposite side the rise of the land pressure is kept easily sustained than on the weak spots which exist beyond.

The recent earthquake shocks in South Carolina were and are undoubtedly due, in my judgment, to the pressure exerted toward the great mountain ranges northwest of the disturbed area. The force of this pressure was something like that of a back water pressing with great might against an obstruction, until the weight or water finally overcame the resistance, when the latter yielded. This reserve pressure was ready to be let loose at the slightest yielding of an adjacent resistance. It would be necessary to know the lateral position to the coast, unless the latter would be at too great a distance.

Nothing is simpler than repeated shocks regular in the new situation, yet it does not seem possible that any further disturbance of great results would follow the first upheaval. This could only happen by supposing the mountain range in the neighborhood of great mountain ranges affords a fine opportunity at any time for one of those mysterious shake-ups when the relative situations favor such, and the conditions are ripe for it, while on the opposite side the rise of the land pressure is kept easily sustained than on the weak spots which exist beyond.

There is no scientific jargon about this, and it affords as plausible an explanation of the south Atlantic earthquake as we have seen. Of course Mr. Cather's theory cannot well be demonstrated to be correct, but the same objection applies to any other earthquake theory.

The known fact that the Atlantic coast is slowly sinking sustains Mr. Cather. It may be centuries, however, before any readjustment of the coastal plain takes place.

Two Remarkable Cases.

Many people seem disposed to doubt the statement of a noted Banks county moonshiner, to the effect that he has averaged a quart of corn whiskey daily, since he was twelve years old. He is now sixty-six, and is hale and hearty.

Such figures are rather startling. In fifty-four years this man must have swallowed about five thousand gallons of corn whiskey. How he could do it, and live, is a mystery.

But the moonshiner had a dangerous rival in Mr. Tracy, the late New York millionaire. In the contest over Tracy's will, the fact came out that for the past thirty years he was in the habit of drinking two or three quarts of wine and a quart of brandy every day. A strong effort has been made to show that this habit affected his mind and caused his death; but his physician, Dr. Hopkins, does not indorse this view. He says, on oath, that Tracy remained of sound mind until his death, and that the quantity of liquor he consumed did him good. On cross examination he denied that the excessive use of alcohol would cause insanity, and quoted Doctors Bucknell and William A. Hammond.

From these two cases it appears that some men are so constituted that poison supplies them with a long felt wank. It nourishes them and keeps them alive. Such men are moonshiners. They deserve to rank with the glass eater from Texas. Not one man in a million could imitate their example and live ten years. The only explanation that can be given is that the systems of these men were surcharged with the poison of some chronic disease, and the liquor acted as counter poison. Such instances have no bearing on the drink problem, but they will interest the medical world.

A Beautiful Evening.

There is nothing in this world more beautiful than the evening of a life of pure aims and good deeds. The recent arrival of Senator Allan G. Thurman, by the democratic of Cincinnati, had in it something peculiarly impressive. It was the tribute of the young democracy to the patriarch of the party.

Mr. Thurman is the most distinguished living democrat. His intellect would have made him great, but no degree of mental endowment, alone, could have built a fame like his. Its firmest pillars are the moral characteristics of the man—his courage, his honesty, his generosity, and his good disposition. It happened that his career in national politics came in a time of great commotion and of more than usual corruption, and against such a background this record stands out in striking clearness.

Whoever else was weak or wavering, he was strong and steadfast. Whoever else was false or delinquent, he was never within the reach of calumny or suspicion.

It is a sad thing to see the life of such a man waning toward its evening, and to hear him declare in his simple, unaffected way, that his public career has closed forever. Though he renounces all the honors of politics, and contentedly withdraws to the peace of his own fireside, there are honors which he cannot escape. They are such tributes as he has just received from the democrats of Cincinnati, and which await him wherever in this country his noble form is recognized. All honor to the old Roman!

The New York Herald makes the important announcement that Mrs. Dion Bonicant has returned to America "for purely private reasons."

A DIME museum in Cincinnati has a new curiosity—a rival of Blind Tom. It is a negro girl only five years old that can read anything printed in English. The only teaching the child has ever had was to have the alphabet repeated to her once or twice by a lady who was attracted by the little child's brightness. The literary prodigy lived with her aged grandparents, neither of whom could read.

One day, about a year ago, the grandmother of the little girl was sick. She brought a Bible to the bedside and asked the old woman if she would like to have a chapter read. To please the child the grandmother said, "Yes, honey," when the little girl began to read as fluently as any preacher. The old grandmother was frightened and sent for the neighbors. It is still a question in the minds of the superstitious, whether the reading child is blessed from above or possessed of a devil. Her name is Lizzie Danen. Her mother was a malatto and her father was black, and both were of only ordinary intelligence.

Wiggins had nothing to do with yesterday's earthquake.

Some time ago, Dr. William A. Hammond predicted that the "coming man" would be bald. Mr. Virgil G. Eaton, in the October number of the Popular Science Monthly, supports Mr. Hammond's opinion. Mr. Eaton is a newspaper reporter, and has opportunities of observing the heads of men in all kinds of assemblies. Comparing the proportion of bald heads in various crowds—at churches, theaters, lectures, variety shows and dog-fights—Mr. Eaton proves by figures that the more cultivated and refined audiences show the greater number of bald-heads. From observations in Boston it appears that the audience attending Matthew Arnold's lectures and Adelina Patti's concerts, contained twice as many bald-heads as did the audiences at John L. Sullivan's exhibition, and at Fra Diavolo and the Mikado. The number of bald-heads increases as humanity becomes more intelligent and refined.

A BLOOMINGTON paper blames the New York reporters for writing so much about the marriage of George Gould to Miss Kingston, and of Jimmie Blaine to Miss Nevins. On another page the aforesaid paper devotes a column to each marriage—stolen from the reporters.

TWO YEARS ago a rich old widower lived in New York, and his three unmarried daughters kept house for him. The widower was Dr. George Bull, and he was a jovial old man and fond of society. In January, 1885, Dr. Bull married Miss Shaw, who was only twenty-eight. His three daughters objected to their young mother and proceeded to send their father to Bloomingdale insane asylum. Mr. Bull returned her husband on a writ of habeas corpus, and submitted him to an examination by experts who pronounced him perfectly sane. Since then Dr. and Mrs. Bull have been constantly shadowed by detectives. A few nights ago Dr. Bull was arrested by five men just as he was coming down his front steps. He was placed in a carriage and taken to the home of his wife. Mrs. Bull was turned out of her home by the trustees of her husband's property. She went to her mother's house then. She has been so much annoyed by detectives that her brother-in-law threatens to shoot one man who continues to watch her. Dr. Bull is not a drunkard, but is the victim of his daughters. They do not intend to share his money with the young wife, if they can help it. They have influential friends to aid them.

The Indian war was closed by the capture of Geronimo, but the war between Chicago and St. Louis will never end.

It was evident all day yesterday that Mr. Westmoreland would have been elected if he had not been pulled down by the manner in which his ticket was put out and by the ticket itself. Hundreds of his friends voted against him, and said when they did so they could not vote for Westmoreland because of the clique that was behind him and because of the trade that was made for the ticket.

The whipping post still flourishes in Delaware.

SENATOR LOGAN says the country is on the verge of ruin. Senator Logan makes the mistake of supposing that he is the country.

PERSONS AND THINGS.

SENATOR LOGAN's son, John A. Logan, Jr., is passing a few days in friends in New York. Unlike his father, he is of medium stature, slender and light of complexion. His demeanor is modest and he makes a favorable impression wherever he goes. No bee buzzes, as yet, about his undeveloped brain.

Secretly, the Italian faster, receives letters daily from all parts, asking for his secret of living without food. The other day the chief telegraphist of the Molteni railway, at Grassano, Italy, sent him the following dispatch: "Being suspended from my functions for a month, I beg you to let me starve before resuming work." But such requests to reveal the secret that would solve the old problem which has caused so many revolutions.

CHILTERNHAM, England, is a very enlightened town, especially noted for its many excellent schools. And yet the whole town is worked up over the alleged appearance of an old lady's ghost who wants to show somebody where she buried 4500 pounds she died. The municipal authorities, however, have offered £250 to anyone who will find the treasure; and regular "ghost trains" are run in from the suburbs for the convenience of those who want to see the old lady's shade.

The reporters of the French press represent their entire veracity and accuracy in a very decided manner. A figure reporter of account of an interview with the secretary of the Chinese legation was denounced as incorrect by that officer, sent him a condensed version of the truth, and was told to get it right. In fact, the interview was exceedingly accurate.

SHADOCK HATHAWAY recently died in Rising Sun, Ind., aged 94 years. His body dated back to the completion of an excellent pair of boots for a clergyman in Rising Sun, who still wears them with comfort.

HON. GEORGE BANCROFT, the historian, has returned to Newport from his visit to Italy. He had been invited to dine with Mrs. John Jacob Astor on his return, and a Chicago chronicler declared the congratulations of many cottagers.

PHIL ARMOUR is set down as one of the heaviest men on the Chicago board of trade, both as to avoidpools and pounds sterling. He weighs 400 pounds, and is a Chicago chronicler declares that he could scratch up about $20,000,000.

DEPUTY SHERIFF JOHN PRINDIVILLE, of Detroit, took his sweetheart for a sail to Fort Huron on Sunday. Soon after the start, she started to swim in the lake, and he started to shoot her. He had lost the key to the boat, and the boat was on fire. He wrenched the six-shooter from his grasp, and seized a rope, tied the bully hand and foot.

"Now, Mike," he said, in his cool, determined way, "you've boasted that the whole range of the lake is yours. You've boasted that you've never killed a man in your life unless you talked him to death. Well, now I mean to treat you as you deserve, and let people see what a mis-tryer you are."

Mike took a pair of handcuffs from his pocket, and fastened them on Mike's wrists. To the cuffs he fastened a line, and the line was fastened to his side. Then he placed the noose of the rope around the fellow's neck, and made a dash for it. He had just finished the dash and a second time he got on his feet. He mounted his horse and turned the animal's head toward the post.

LOOKS LIKE WITCHCRAFT.

Strange and Unaccountable Affliction of a Rochester Boy.

ROCHESTER, September 28.—If such a thing as witchcraft exists at the present time, then this city has a genuine, stamped-on-the-hot case of it. Leonard Westover is a paper hanger who resides at No. 111 Huntington street.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Westover, is a widow, and has a family of five children. Leonard is the youngest, and is now twelve years of age.

The boy has been afflicted with a strange and unaccountable ailment for several weeks. He is unable to move, and his body is covered with a peculiar rash.

DIVERSIFIED INDUSTRIES

THE ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION AT WORK.

More About Home Industries—What the Manufacturers' Association is Doing—The Proposed Excelsior Factory—What the Machinery Will Cost—Factory at Marietta.

The Atlanta Manufacturers' association has gone to work to ascertain the exact condition of all branches of manufacturing in Atlanta and the inducements which are offered here for the establishment of manufactures in any line.

Mr. F. H. Richardson, acting secretary of the association, will as soon as possible prepare full and accurate statistics showing the number, capacity and output of the manufactures in this city. It has been several years since any such work has been attempted and it will, doubtless, result in a surprisingly large showing for the industries of Atlanta.

The interest in the association is increasing as members realize the practical good which can be done by hearty co-operation. The rooms of the association, at No. 354 Broad street, are open every day. Any information in the possession of the secretary as to the condition of manufactures in Atlanta will be cheerfully furnished to any parties interested.

Recently there has been some talk of the establishment of another excelsior factory in Atlanta. The local demand for excelsior is considerable. One concern uses from twenty-five to thirty tons a month and another about six or eight tons. Atlanta would be a fine distributing point for excelsior, as the nearest competition would be at Louisville, Ky.

The following letter to Boyd & Baxter, furniture manufacturers, of this city, shows how little capital is required for the establishment of an excelsior factory.

AN EXCELSIOR FACTORY, and how varied is the material which can be worked up into this valuable article. The superintendent of the Athens, Ohio, Water Wheel and Machinery company, writes to Boyd & Baxter, as follows:

The demand for excelsior machinery has hitherto been very limited, but we are now faced with the prospect of a large and increasing demand. The use of excelsior is increasing rapidly, and the demand for machinery to produce it is increasing correspondingly.

A GREAT BICYCLE RIDE.

Mr. Ed Durant Rides Fourteen Miles in Fifty-Five Minutes in Reporting Election Returns.

Quite a novel as well as brilliant ride on a bicycle took place yesterday.

Mr. Ed Durant was engaged at 10 o'clock to go to Adamsville and report the election returns. He was accompanied by a crowd of negroes who were enjoying a picnic in the woods. The colored citizens who had evidently never before seen a bicycle were seized with the idea that the strange looking traveler was the advance agent of the earthquake. With deafening yells a score or more of them started on a dead run to capture the cyclist. Then a live race began. The negroes laid back their heads and moved like professional runners. The cyclist leaped forward and the light-shining wheel fairly spun. Up hill and down hill for a mile the race was continued before the last bike was dismounted.

The polls at Adamsville were closed at 3 p. m. At 5 o'clock the vote was counted out, and Mr. Durant started home with the returns. He came by Adamsville and stopped five minutes. At 4:15 Mr. Durant was in the CONSTITUTION office, having done the fourteen mile ride home in fifty-five minutes. That is a splendid record for country riding.

Sunday-School Convention at Trinity Church Today.

The quarterly convention of Fulton County Sunday School association will be held at Trinity church today at ten o'clock a. m.

The programme is a very interesting one, embracing addresses by such well known speakers as Rev. J. W. Lee, Judge Van Hook, Captain John Millegre and others, and in addition to good singing by the schools, there will be several special songs by some bright little girls. Let all Sunday school workers be there.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION

RESULTS IN FAVOR OF MESSRS.
BRAY, WELLS AND HOWELL.

The Perkins Ticket Given a Terrible Defeat—The Work That Was Done at the Polls—The Character of the Contest—The Success of the Different Candidates—The Result.

The democratic primary yesterday, for legislative nominees, was one of the most exciting elections ever seen in Atlanta.

While the best of order prevailed, the workers at the polls displayed a most wonderful amount of energy, while the general interest in the election was unbroken.

Over four thousand votes were polled, and the six candidates averaged 2,215 apiece.

Mr. Clark Howell led the entire list, receiving a total vote of 2,939. Mr. Perkins led the other end of the ticket, receiving 1,545 votes, or 1,424 less than Mr. Howell received.

Mr. Perkins was even at the tail end of his own ticket, falling 192 votes behind Mr. Fain and 339 votes behind Mr. Westmoreland.

Mr. Westmoreland, the leader of the Perkins ticket, was distanced by Colonel Wells to the tune of 708 votes. When the shades of evening closed Mr. Howell was 1,005 votes ahead of the leader of the Perkins ticket.

To figure a bit further: The regular democratic ticket received a total of 8,304 for the three candidates. The Perkins ticket fared 5,068, and was beaten by an average of over a thousand votes each candidate.

AT SOUTH ATLANTA.

The Events of the Day at the Largest of the Voting Places.

The ballot box for the south Atlanta precinct was located in the basement of the Falton county court house, and through it 2,419
free American citizens spoke.

The poll was opened at 7 o'clock, with John Stevens, representing the regular democratic ticket, sitting on one side, and James Gray, representing the Perkins ticket, sitting on the other side of the box, while Judge Tammor
and the necessary clerks sat behind the table
upon which the box rested.

Before the doors were opened several men had congregated about the courthouse. Mr. Green Dodd, representing the Perkins ticket, stood at the head of the stairway leading into the basement, while Judge James Anderson, representing the Perkins ticket, stood at the head of the stairway leading into the basement.

Mr. Sam Venable was present with a hand full of the regular democratic ticket, and with a broad, pleasant smile on his face, met the voters as they came in. The first tickets deposited were handled by a small group of workmen who came in soon after the poll opening, and the first hour of the contest was but soon after eight o'clock the voters began coming in rapidly.

Carriages provided by both parties commenced rolling up, and the workers found much to do in directing the workers were well drilled and did their work extremely well, many a vote being changed
after the voter reached the courthouse.

By half past nine the heavy paving stones about the building were being rolled away, and the alleyway leading to the box was filled with workers, and at every step the voter found his path obstructed by some one who
wanted to instruct him how to vote.

Dr. Perkins stationed himself near the ballot box, and during the entire day remained within the narrow passway, handing the Perkins ticket
to the arriving voter and petitioning for a vote.
Mr. Howell, on the other hand, remained in the open, and at every step the voter
found his path obstructed by some one who
wanted to instruct him how to vote.

By one o'clock the voting was resumed in full force. The Perkins supporters realized that they had to do or die, and with a yamout vote this ticket style, they assailed every voter who gave their ticket a life of two often in good hands, and in less than an hour everybody present became satisfied that the democratic ticket had swept the field. Soon after 2 o'clock the Perkins supporters began to grow despondent, and one after another they had lost the fight.

Some of the more energetic held out, however, saying that the workmen would turn out late in the afternoon, and give their ticket a life of Below will be found a detailed account of the proceedings at the several precincts, a tabulated statement of the county votes, sketches of the successful candidates, together

with other interesting matters.

At West End the voting at the usual hour in the morning, and continued without interruption until three o'clock in the afternoon, when the poll closed. The vote was much heavier than usual at this precinct, and was a constant run on the managers throughout the day. The people of the district took more than ordinary interest in the election, and spoke plainly their choice. West End believing Mr. Howell's home, it was presumed that he would carry the precinct, but the most surprising exception to this was that he did not give him the precinct by the vote he received.

The voting at South Bend was without any unusual incident. Friends of the regular democratic ticket and the Perkins ticket were present when the polls opened and remained until they closed. They worked hard for their candidates, but kept in a good
order, and the election was a very quiet one.
The registration, as was the case at other precincts. When the polls closed the vote was quickly counted, and the result was that the regular democratic ticket carried the precinct.

The voting at East Point was quite large.
The voters assembled at the polls early, and deposited their ballots without delay. The friends ticket were present when the polls opened and remained until they closed. They worked

hard for their candidates, but kept in a good
order, and the election was a very quiet one.
